

Art in the Time of Covid

June 9, 2020

Artists interpret the world, and right now it's a new and unfamiliar world we're living in. We're providing an opportunity for all of us to share our creative work inspired by this experience.

We are sending out periodic emails showcasing the covid-inspired work of Rappahannock artists and others in the community whose creativity has been stirred by these times.

The art takes different forms -- visual, written, video or audio -- but deals in some way with the new patterns of our everyday lives. If you would like to participate in this program or give us feedback, please contact newsletter@raac.org.

Wendi Sirat

"My creative energies this spring have been focusing on working in my OWN garden, which has been needing attention for a while. It's been extremely enjoyable and satisfying! Though I still play lots of music, I haven't written any new music in a while. This is Buddha in the goldenseal patch with native phlox & delphiniums in the background."

Tom Mullany

"Here's a sketch I made back on April 3rd. It's called The Black Swan and attempts to express the feeling of experiencing an "unpredictable or unforeseen event, typically with extreme consequences..." (as the dictionary says)."

Susan Raines

"Walking on our property near Castleton recently, I came upon this well preserved deer head lying in the dead leaves amid new spring growth.

In this surreal time of the pandemic, I find myself looking more closely at nature and contemplating its ability to create and destroy."
